

The Slave and the Lion

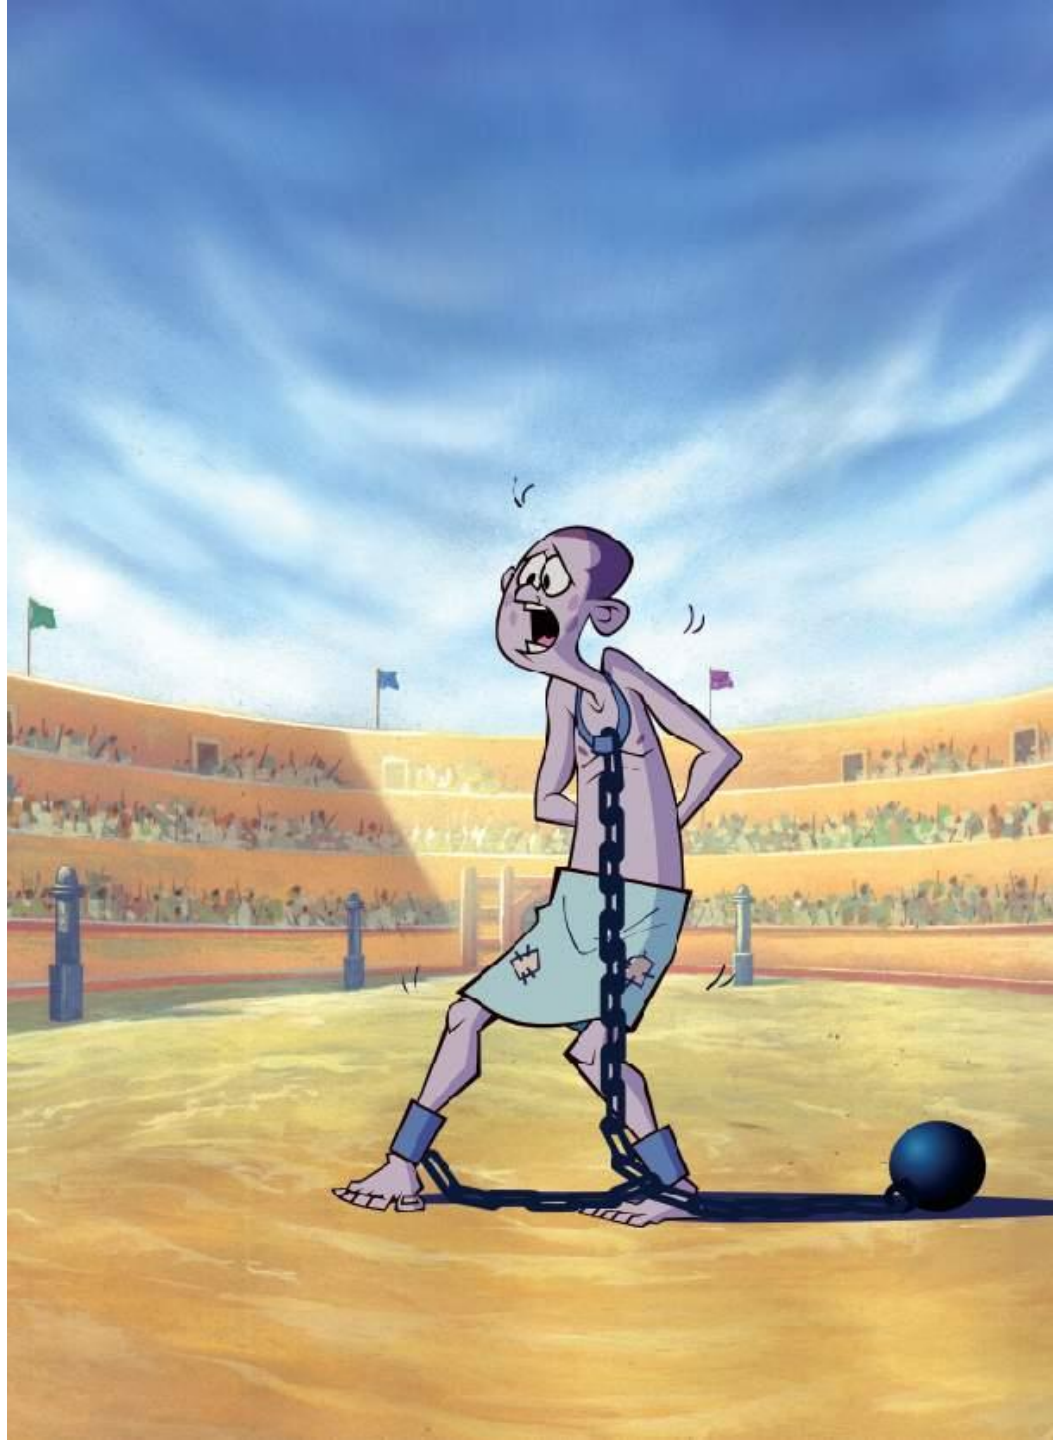

Long-long ago
slaves were treated very cruelly.

They were even forced to fight each other or wild animals.

One day a slave was put in a large
stadium where he was to fight a fierce
hungry lion.
The slave was very scared.

The door of the cage
opened and the hungry lion
roared and
came out.
Suddenly he went in front of the slave
and bowed down.

Everybody was amazed and
the slave was set free.

The king of the city
asked the slave why the lion had bowed to him.
"The lion and I had once met in the jungle," he said.

"I had taken out
a thorn from his foot then.

I could have killed him but I felt sorry for him and let him
free.

Today the lion
has let me free."

The king learnt
that he must follow Ahinsa.

He set all the
slaves free
and never hurt
any animal
again.
